HISTORICAL READING.

A List of Books in the Plainfield Public Library.

PREPARED BY MISS EMMA L. ADAMS, LIBRARIAN.

A FEW WORDS WITH THE TEACHER.

THIS list has been compiled for the use of teachers and pupils of the Public Schools, with the hope that they may find it of service in the teaching and studying of history. It contains only such works as are to be found in the Public Library. Being prepared for the Plainfield Schools, the countries most prominent in the school course have therefore been made most prominent in this list.

Such books as are especially good for school use are indicated by the asterisk at the left. Books written for young people are indicated by the J before the call number.

Suggestive in teaching this study will be found :—Adams' Manual of historical literature, Adams' Study of history in American colleges, Gordy and Twitchell's Pathfinder, Green's Libraries and schools, Hinsdale's How to study and teach history, and Stubb's Lectures on the study of history. General reference books, valuable both to teacher and pupil are:—The A. L. A. Index of general literature, Brewer's Historic note-book, Champlin's Cyclopædia of persons and places, Haydn's Dictionary of dates, Larned's History for ready reference, Matson's References for literary workers (especially good for historical debates), Poole's Index of periodicals, Putnam's World's progress, San Francisco Public Library list of English prose fiction, and the Scribner-Black Atlas of the world. Books of reference in United States history are:—American encyclopædia, Appleton's Cyclopædia of American biography, Lossing's Cyclopædia of U. S. history, and Winsor's Narrative and critical history. In English history:—The Dictionary of national biography, Encyclopædia Britannica, Low and Pulling's Dictionary of English history, and Strutt's Costumes of England. In ancient history are Smith's Classical dictionaries and the various Classical atlases.

The arrangement is as follows:—General histories of a country followed by the histories of particular periods in chronological order, each period followed (1) by the biographies of prominent men of that period, and (2) by stories, poems, etc., illustrative of that period. In selecting books on any one period in the history of a country one should refer back to the general histories of that country. For a more complete list of the historical works in the Library, the Library catalog should be consulted.
